Abstract	The common theme was "Efforts to prevent social isolation of elderly women - Case studies from Japan and Korea," and Sasaki reported on a one-year longitudinal study of community welfare activities targeting elderly women (healthy elderly) who do not use elderly welfare services. As a result, it was found that in rural areas, people often work with their backs turned to others and rarely talk to anyone other than their family, and it was shown the importance of implementing meetings as a program to prevent social isolation of elderly women after the death of their husbands.
