Abstract	There has been a long-standing shortage of childcare workers nationwide. Efforts are needed to increase the number of people who want to become childcare workers. We created a program in which childcare students intervene in work experience for junior high school students. The work experience together was effective in helping both junior high school students and childcare students understand the profession. The participating junior high school students became interested in childcare work. It was an opportunity for childcare students to realize their own growth. It also had the effect of reducing the burden on childcare facilities.
keyword	Work experience for junior high school students, Childcare students, Occupational Understanding
