Abstract	Foreign language education in elementary schools is becoming increasingly important in today's globalized world. Japan is no exception, and in the context of a time where the improvement of foreign language skills is in demand, the introduction of foreign language education at the elementary school level has gained attention. This paper focuses on foreign language education in Japanese elementary schools. First, it reviews the goals stated in the Elementary School Curriculum Guidelines for the foreign language subject. Then, it organizes the approach and teaching system for foreign language education in elementary schools, and further examines the English subject from a global perspective. Finally, based on these points, the paper reflects on the foreign language subject in elementary schools, considering the challenges and future outlook.
