Abstract	The increase in the number of consultations and responses concerning child abuse is an important social problem that needs to be improved. Therefore, a literature review was conducted with the aim of obtaining suggestions to be utilized in the field of maternal and child health care activities regarding the prevention of child abuse in maternal and child health care activities conducted by public health nurses. 15 original papers and research reports with contents in line with the purpose of this study were selected by searching the literature published from 2013 to 2022 using the web version of the Central Journal of Medical Science. The 15 articles were divided into five groups by content: “information collection and assessment,” “collaboration with related organizations,” “support for specific pregnant women,” “support focusing on isolation,” and “ongoing support similar to Neubora. As a result of the analysis and discussion, important points that should be considered when conducting maternal and child health care activities were derived, all of which provide suggestions for the field of maternal and child health care activities with an awareness of the prevention of child abuse.
