Abstract	This paper introduces a recreation of the “event photograph puzzle” carried out at the Christmas party of an autism spectrum society. This recreation was that attendees reconstruct the pieces of enlarged photographs of the annual events of the organization concerned. From the attendee’s reaction and the parent’s comment, it was suggested that the photographs of familiar scene promote both the participation of the autistic persons to the activity and of the whole attendees to the scene. Furthermore, it was considered that the support: showing a completed chart, using pasteboard, and admiring, which raises a sense of accomplishment, contributed to an autistic person’s commitment. In addition, it was also considered that the use of the huge and visible stimulus contributed the whole attendee’s commitment.
