Abstract	This study aims to examine the outcomes of the recurrent education program that the University Consortium in Saga has been engaged in for a decade. We were able to collect different opinions about this educational program from 14 graduates who had completed the program in previous years. Their responses indicated the issues to be addressed in future training, including structuring lecture content to incorporate practical themes and improving the learning environment by utilizing the on-demand resources.
keyword	developmental disorder, recurrent education, the University Consortium in Saga
