Abstract	Kyushu is experiencing a population decline, with the exception of some areas, and residents of these areas are often elderly parents, as their children live in large cities. In addition, women are living longer than average, and they are finding themselves in a situation where they have no one to rely on in their local community after losing their husbands. This time, we reported on the content of an exchange program for elderly women in R district, Y city, X prefecture, which was developed in collaboration with the town planning council in R district, with the cooperation of students. We indicated that in the future, connections between elderly women in the local community will be necessary.
