研究業績 英文表記

Title Research on the Usefulness of Information Sharing by the School Health Office Application Software Author Kawano M., Kurihara A Affiliation Saga Univ. Faculty of Education Special Support School, Saga Univ. Affiliation Saga Univ. Faculty of Education Special Support School, Saga University are promoting inter-school cooperation in school health centered on school nurses. The health room application manages the health information of children and students by tablet input by utilizing ICT. The purpose of this study is to share health information between teachers and between schools and homes using the infirmary app, whether it can be used for health education, and to effectively reduce the work of nurses in the infirmary. We examined its usefulness as to whether it could be. Abstract In order to verify the usefulness of the infirmary app, we prepared an iPad dedicated to the infirmary app in the attached elementary school infirmary. A visitor to the infirmary using erecord and the results of regular health examinations were linked. And the child's personal record can be used as a medical record. As a result, it will be easier to understand the child's health room usage status and physical and mental health condition, and it will be easier for the school nurse and the classroom teacher to share the child's health information, and this chart will be used for health guidance to the child. I was able to. It was found that systematizing this app throughout the school would be useful for the health management of children, bullying, early detection and early response to school refusal. In addition, it became easier for the school would be useful for the health management of children, bullying, early detection and early response to school refusa	和文
所属 佐賀大学教育学部附属特別支援学校、佐賀大学 英文 Title How Cooperation between School-Nurses at Saga University Attached Schools : Research on the Usefulness of Information Sharing by the School Health Office Application Software Author Kawano M., Kurihara A Affiliation Saga Univ. Faculty of Education Special Support School, Saga University are promoting inter-school cooperation in school health centered on school nurses. The health room application manages the health information of shaga University are promoting inter-school cooperation in school health centered on school nurses. The health room application manages the health information of children and students by tablet input by utilizing ICT. The purpose of this study is to share health information between teachers and between schools and homes using the infirmary upp, whether it can be used for health education, and to effectively reduce the work of nurses in the infirmary. We examined its usefulness as to whether it could be. Un other to verify the usefulness of the infirmary app, we prepared an iPad dedicated to the infirmary app. 2015 was analyzed, and in 2017, the infirmary. Avisitor to the infirmary varist from May 2015 was analyzed, and in 2017, the infirmary use cord and the esuits of regular health examinations were linked. And the child's personal record can be used as a medical record. May a result, it will be easier to understand the child's health from usage status and physical and mental health condition, and it will be easier for the school nurse and the cheating uidance to the child. I was able to. It was found that systematizing this app throughout the school would be useful for the health management of thidren, bullying, early detection and early response to school refusual. In addition, it became easier for the nurs	表題
技文 Title How Cooperation between School-Nurses at Saga University Attached Schools : Research on the Usefulness of Information Sharing by the School Health Office Application Software Author Kawano M., Kurihara A Affiliation Saga Univ. Faculty of Education Special Support School, Saga University are promoting inter-school cooperation in school health centered on school nurses. The health room application manages the health information of children and students by tablet input by utilizing ICT. The purpose of this study is to share health information between teachers and between schools and homes using the infirmary app, whether it can be used for health education, and to effectively reduce the work of nurses in the infirmary. We examined its usefulness as to whether it could be. Abstract In order to verify the usefulness of the infirmary app, we prepared an iPad dedicated to the infirmary app in the attached elementary school infirmary. A visitor to the infirmary estender to verify the usefulness of the infirmary app. ve stepsonal record can be used as a medical record. Abstract As a result, it will be easier to understand the child's health room usage status and phealth guidance to the child's health noron usage status and phealth guidance to the child's health noron usage status and phealth guidance to the child's health noron usage status and phealth guidance to the child's health noron usage status and phealth guidance to the child's health noron usage status and phealth guidance to the child's health noron usage status and phealth guidance to the child's health information, and this schart will be used for health guidance to the child's health information, and this chart will be used for health guidance to the child's healt	著者名	河野恵,栗原淳
Title How Cooperation between School-Nurses at Saga University Attached Schools : Research on the Usefulness of Information Sharing by the School Health Office Application Software Author Kawano M., Kurihara A Affiliation Saga Univ. Faculty of Education Special Support School, Saga University are promoting inter-school cooperation in school health centered on school nurses. The health room application manages the health information of children and students by tablet input by utilizing ICT. The purpose of this study is to share health information between teachers and between schools and homes using the infirmary app, whether it can be used for health education, and to effectively reduce the work of nurses in the infirmary. We examined its usefulness as to whether it could be. In order to verify the usefulness of the infirmary app, we prepared an iPad dedicated to the infirmary app in the attached elementary school infirmary. A visitor to the infirmary entered the information on the iPad about the injury and physical condition. Input data for two years from May 2015 was analyzed, and in 2017, the infirmary usage record and the results of regular health econdition, and it will be easier for the school nurse and the classroom teacher to share the child's health information, and this chart will be used for health guidance to the child. I was able to. It was found that systematizing this app throughout the school would be useful for the health management of children, bullying, early detection and early response to school refusal. In addition, it became easier for the nursery teacher to manage health information, and it was possible to reduce the work in the infirmary management.	所属	佐賀大学教育学部附属特別支援学校、佐賀大学
Title Research on the Usefulness of Information Sharing by the School Health Office Application Software Author Kawano M., Kurihara A Affiliation Saga Univ. Faculty of Education Special Support School, Saga Univ. The four schools attached to the Faculty of Education of Saga University are promoting inter-school cooperation in school health centered on school nurses. The health room application manages the health information of children and students by tablet input by utilizing ICT. The purpose of this study is to share health information between teachers and between schools and homes using the infirmary app, whether it can be used for health education, and to effectively reduce the work of nurses in the infirmary. We examined its usefulness as to whether it could be. Abstract In order to verify the usefulness of the infirmary app, we prepared an iPad dedicated to the infirmary app in the attached elementary school infirmary. A visitor to the infirmary entered the information on the iPad about the injury and physical condition. Input data for two years from May 2015 was analyzed, and in 2017, the infirmary usege record and the results of regular health examinations were linked. And the child's personal record can be used as a medical record. As a result, it will be easier to understand the child's health norm usage status and physical and mental health condition, and it will be easier for the school nurse and the classroom teacher to share the child's health information, and this chart will be used for health guidance to the child. I was able to. It was found that systematizing this app throughout the school would be useful for the health management of children, bullying, early detection and early response to school refusal. In addition, it became easier f	英文
Affiliation Saga Univ. Faculty of Education Special Support School, Saga Univ. Affiliation The four schools attached to the Faculty of Education of Saga University are promoting inter-school cooperation in school health centered on school nurses. The health room application manages the health information of children and students by tablet input by utilizing ICT. The purpose of this study is to share health information between teachers and between schools and homes using the infirmary app, whether it can be used for health education, and to effectively reduce the work of nurses in the infirmary. We examined its usefulness as to whether it could be. Abstract In order to verify the usefulness of the infirmary app, we prepared an iPad dedicated to the infirmary app in the attached elementary school infirmary. A visitor to the infirmary use gress from May 2015 was analyzed, and in 2017, the infirmary usage record and the results of regular health examinations were linked. And the child's personal record can be used as a medical record. As a result, it will be easier to understand the child's health room usage status and physical and mental health condition, and it will be easier for the school nurse and the child's usefulnes to the child's health information, and this chart will be useful health guidance to the child. I was able to. It was found that systematizing this app throughout the school would be useful for the health management of children, bullying, early detection and early response to school refusal. In addition, it became easier for the infirmary management.	Title	How Cooperation between School-Nurses at Saga University Attached Schools : Research on the Usefulness of Information Sharing by the School Health Office Application Software
AbstractAbstractAbstractThe four schools attached to the Faculty of Education of Saga University are promoting inter-school cooperation in school health centered on school nurses. The health room application manages the health information of children and students by tablet input by utilizing ICT. The purpose of this study is to share health information between teachers and between schools and homes using the infirmary app, whether it can be used for health education, and to effectively reduce the work of nurses in the infirmary. We examined its usefulness ato whether it could be. In order to verify the usefulness of the infirmary app, we prepared an iPad dedicated to the infirmary app in the attached elementary school infirmary. A visitor to the infirmary entered the information on the iPad about the injury and physical condition. Input data for two years from May 2015 was analyzed, and in 2017, the infirmary usage record and the results of regular health examinations were linked. And the child's personal record can be used as a medical record. As a result, it will be easier to understand the child's health room usage status and physical and mental health condition, and it will be easier for the school nurse and the classroom teacher to share the child's health information, and this chart will be used for health guidance to the child. I was able to. It was found that systematizing this app throughout the school would be useful for the health management of children, bullying, early detection and early response to school refusal. In addition, it became easier for the nursery teacher to manage health information, and it was possible to reduce the work in the infirmary management.	Author	Kawano M., Kurihara A
Abstract Inter-school cooperation in school health centered on school nurses. The health room application manages the health information of children and students by tablet input by utilizing ICT. The purpose of this study is to share health information between teachers and between schools and homes using the infirmary app, whether it can be used for health education, and to effectively reduce the work of nurses in the infirmary. We examined its usefulness as to whether it could be. In order to verify the usefulness of the infirmary app, we prepared an iPad dedicated to the infirmary app in the attached elementary school infirmary. A visitor to the infirmary entered the information on the iPad about the injury and physical condition. Input data for two years from May 2015 was analyzed, and in 2017, the infirmary usage record and the results of regular health examinations were linked. And the child's personal record can be used as a medical record. As a result, it will be easier to understand the child's health room usage status and physical and mental health condition, and it will be easier for the school nurse and the classroom teacher to share the child's health information, and this chart will be used for health guidance to the child. I was able to. It was found that systematizing this app throughout the school would be useful for the health management of children, bullying, early detection and early response to school refusal. In addition, it became easier for the nursery teacher to manage health information, and it was possible to reduce the work in the infirmary management.	Affiliation	Saga Univ. Faculty of Education Special Support School, Saga Univ.
keyword school-nurses, school health, application software	Abstract	In order to verify the usefulness of the infirmary app, we prepared an iPad dedicated to the infirmary app in the attached elementary school infirmary. A visitor to the infirmary entered the information on the iPad about the injury and physical condition. Input data for two years from May 2015 was analyzed, and in 2017, the infirmary usage record and the results of regular health examinations were linked. And the child's personal record can be used as a medical record. As a result, it will be easier to understand the child's health room usage status and physical and mental health condition, and it will be easier for the school nurse and the classroom teacher to share the child's health information, and this chart will be used for health guidance to the child. I was able to. It was found that systematizing this app throughout the school would be useful for the health management of children, bullying, early detection and early response to school refusal. In addition, it became easier for the nursery teacher to manage health information, and it was possible to reduce the work in keyword	school-nurses, school health, application software

※本データの英文表記は実際の論文上の表記とは異なります。