研究業績 英文表記

著者名 (編著)加登田惠子、(著)岩本 晋、坂本香里、A.ウィルソン 西九州大学 健康福祉学部 社会福祉学科 (山口県立大学) 英文 Title	和文
西九州大学 健康福祉学部 社会福祉学科 (山口県立大学) 英文	表題	平和のバトンVII〜2021原爆被爆者のライフヒストリーを追って〜(マルチリンガル版)
Title Passing the Baton of Peace VII ~Following the life history of atomic bomb survivors in 2021 Author Keiko Katoda, Susumu Iwamoto, Yukari Sakamoto, A.Willson Nishikyusyu University Faculty of Health and Social Welfare Science (Yamaguchi Prefectural University) The purpose of this research activity is to archive the life histories (oral histories) of A-bomb survivors by interviewing and researching them together with the younger generation (university students). Through this work, we will learn about the tragedy of war, the inhumanity of the atomic bombings, and the effects of the atomic bombings on the lives of the survivors. Furthermore, we aim to pass on the A-bomb experience as a memory of humanity to the next generation without letting it fade away. In addition to writing the summary opening essay, the author served as the primary interviewer and MC for questions with students, and supervised and edited the first transcription of the transcript. I was also in charge of supervising and editing the first transcription. Co-authors Susumu Iwamoto, President of Yudaen, and Kari Sakamoto, Executive Director of Yudaen, were in charge of selecting and coordinating speakers and introducing Yudaen's projects, and A. Wilson (Professor at Yamaguchi Prefectural University) wrote her own essay and supervised the English translations assigned to students. 1) Yoko Kanekiyo 2) Takeshi Kawai 3) Masaki Nasu 4) Eiho Yoneda	著者名	(編著)加登田惠子、(著)岩本 晋、坂本香里、A.ウィルソン
Title Passing the Baton of Peace VI ~Following the life history of atomic bomb survivors in 2021 Author Keiko Katoda, Susumu Iwamoto, Yukari Sakamoto, A. Willson Nishikyusyu University Faculty of Health and Social Welfare Science (Yamaguchi Prefectural University) The purpose of this research activity is to archive the life histories (oral histories) of A-bomb survivors by interviewing and researching them together with the younger generation (university students). Through this work, we will learn about the tragedy of war, the inhumanity of the atomic bombings, and the effects of the atomic bombings on the lives of the survivors. Furthermore, we aim to pass on the A-bomb experience as a memory of humanity to the next generation without letting it fade away. In addition to writing the summary opening essay, the author served as the primary interviewer and MC for questions with students, and supervised and edited the first transcription of the transcript. I was also in charge of supervising and editing the first transcription. Co-authors Susumu Iwamoto, President of Yudaen, and Kari Sakamoto, Executive Director of Yudaen, were in charge of selecting and coordinating speakers and introducing Yudaen's projects, and A. Wilson (Professor at Yamaguchi Prefectural University) wrote her own essay and supervised the English translations assigned to students. 1) Yoko Kanekiyo 2) Takeshi Kawai 3) Masaki Nasu 4) Eiho Yoneda	所属
Author Keiko Katoda, Susumu Iwamoto, Yukari Sakamoto, A.Willson Nishikyusyu University Faculty of Health and Social Welfare Science (Yamaguchi Prefectural University) The purpose of this research activity is to archive the life histories (oral histories) of A-bomb survivors by interviewing and researching them together with the younger generation (university students). Through this work, we will learn about the tragedy of war, the inhumanity of the atomic bombings, and the effects of the atomic bombings on the lives of the survivors. Furthermore, we aim to pass on the A-bomb experience as a memory of humanity to the next generation without letting it fade away. In addition to writing the summary opening essay, the author served as the primary interviewer and MC for questions with students, and supervised and edited the first transcription of the transcript. I was also in charge of supervising and editing the first transcription. Co-authors Susumu Iwamoto, President of Yudaen, and Kari Sakamoto, Executive Director of Yudaen, were in charge of selecting and coordinating speakers and introducing Yudaen's projects, and A. Wilson (Professor at Yamaguchi Prefectural University) wrote her own essay and supervised the English translations assigned to students. 1) Yoko Kanekiyo 2) Takeshi Kawai 3) Masaki Nasu 4) Eiho Yoneda	·
Affiliation Nishikyusyu University Faculty of Health and Social Welfare Science (Yamaguchi Prefectural University) The purpose of this research activity is to archive the life histories (oral histories) of A-bomb survivors by interviewing and researching them together with the younger generation (university students). Through this work, we will learn about the tragedy of war, the inhumanity of the atomic bombings, and the effects of the atomic bombings on the lives of the survivors. Furthermore, we aim to pass on the A-bomb experience as a memory of humanity to the next generation without letting it fade away. In addition to writing the summary opening essay, the author served as the primary interviewer and MC for questions with students, and supervised and edited the first transcription of the transcript. I was also in charge of supervising and editing the first transcription. Co-authors Susumu Iwamoto, President of Yudaen, and Kari Sakamoto, Executive Director of Yudaen, were in charge of selecting and coordinating speakers and introducing Yudaen's projects, and A. Wilson (Professor at Yamaguchi Prefectural University) wrote her own essay and supervised the English translations assigned to students. 1) Yoko Kanekiyo 2) Takeshi Kawai 3) Masaki Nasu 4) Eiho Yoneda	Title
Affiliation (Yamaguchi Prefectural University) The purpose of this research activity is to archive the life histories (oral histories) of A-bomb survivors by interviewing and researching them together with the younger generation (university students). Through this work, we will learn about the tragedy of war, the inhumanity of the atomic bombings, and the effects of the atomic bombings on the lives of the survivors. Furthermore, we aim to pass on the A-bomb experience as a memory of humanity to the next generation without letting it fade away. In addition to writing the summary opening essay, the author served as the primary interviewer and MC for questions with students, and supervised and edited the first transcription of the transcript. I was also in charge of supervising and editing the first transcription. Co-authors Susumu Iwamoto, President of Yudaen, and Kari Sakamoto, Executive Director of Yudaen, were in charge of selecting and coordinating speakers and introducing Yudaen's projects, and A. Wilson (Professor at Yamaguchi Prefectural University) wrote her own essay and supervised the English translations assigned to students. 1) Yoko Kanekiyo 2) Takeshi Kawai 3) Masaki Nasu 4) Eiho Yoneda	Author	Keiko Katoda , Susumu Iwamoto, Yukari Sakamoto, A. Willson
Abstract (oral histories) of A-bomb survivors by interviewing and researching them together with the younger generation (university students). Through this work, we will learn about the tragedy of war, the inhumanity of the atomic bombings, and the effects of the atomic bombings on the lives of the survivors. Furthermore, we aim to pass on the A-bomb experience as a memory of humanity to the next generation without letting it fade away. In addition to writing the summary opening essay, the author served as the primary interviewer and MC for questions with students, and supervised and edited the first transcription of the transcript. I was also in charge of supervising and editing the first transcription. Co-authors Susumu Iwamoto, President of Yudaen, and Kari Sakamoto, Executive Director of Yudaen, were in charge of selecting and coordinating speakers and introducing Yudaen's projects, and A. Wilson (Professor at Yamaguchi Prefectural University) wrote her own essay and supervised the English translations assigned to students. 1) Yoko Kanekiyo 2) Takeshi Kawai 3) Masaki Nasu 4) Eiho Yoneda	Affiliation keyword Life History, A-bomb survivors, Children in occupation period	Abstract	(oral histories) of A-bomb survivors by interviewing and researching them together with the younger generation (university students). Through this work, we will learn about the tragedy of war, the inhumanity of the atomic bombings, and the effects of the atomic bombings on the lives of the survivors. Furthermore, we aim to pass on the A-bomb experience as a memory of humanity to the next generation without letting it fade away. In addition to writing the summary opening essay, the author served as the primary interviewer and MC for questions with students, and supervised and edited the first transcription of the transcript. I was also in charge of supervising and editing the first transcription. Co-authors Susumu Iwamoto, President of Yudaen, and Kari Sakamoto, Executive Director of Yudaen, were in charge of selecting and coordinating speakers and introducing Yudaen's projects, and A. Wilson (Professor at Yamaguchi Prefectural University) wrote her own essay and supervised the English translations assigned to students. 1) Yoko Kanekiyo 2) Takeshi Kawai 3) Masaki Nasu
· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·	keyword	Life History, A-bomb survivors, Children in occupation period